The seminar on Research Methodology organised by the Department of Geography, VCFW was an enlightening one as the eminent speaker Dr Chandrima Sen highlighted on both the epistemology and ontology of qualitative research. She started with the in-depth study of understanding processes, behaviour, diversity, differences and our biases as researchers. She emphasized the history of qualitative research in Geography which is a long tradition in the subject starting from Bunge's and Sauer's time. Observation, interviews, focus group discussion, content analysis, textual analysis has been the integral parts of this technique. She focussed on the nature of observation, how it can be an acquired skill when the questions need to be answered like when to focus, how to focus. The research ethics, analysis techniques were discussed. The lecture ended with the inspiring stories of Sangtin and Richa Nagar and the real-life experiences with the students as well.
